

The first thing that came to my mind when I saw the image was making a border to all. Outlining them tags really helped me haha. It slightly became easy rather than blindly going through trial and error. And also there's no such thing as "trial and error" at first because there was no code to begin with. So what I did, following the instructions on making html tags first, creating outlines, coloring those sections, and placing.